How to save 1,580 hours of review

Alexandra Buzle, eDiscovery Manager

"An impossible looking task made possible… Special thanks to the team for getting us over the line."

Supporting a client through their eDiscovery workflow. Email data. Mobile phones. 20 boxes of paper.

Keywords, TAR and Managed Review

Our review team worked closely with the client and the project manager, minimising the costs associated with document review:

- 444,000 documents reduced to 120,722 documents using multiple keyword iterations.
- 90,286 documents removed from manual review by strategic and defensible project management and TAR.
- 44,638 documents reviewed in the first and second level review at a rate of 57 documents/hour
- 12,000 documents disclosed

Evidence fragmented across multiple data sources and types, and a range of services (forensics, scanning & indexing, managed review and disclosure) were all managed by one project manager. This approach ensured that the client had clear, insightful information enabling them to make informed decisions.

One project manager. One coordinated eDiscovery workflow.

By combining strategic project management with TAR 2.0, we turned a complex, multi-source matter into a focused route to disclosure, saving the client approximately 1,580 review hours and £85,500 in the process.
